

That's the trouble with all rich men. They expect a woman to love them for themselves alone. When they make no further effort than to spend money on a woman, that's all very well, but if you're no fun, you must expect to be hooked.

You take life and your money too seriously. You should go through a revolution. Then you would see how little anything counts.