

H: Oh, are you the new tenant? Mr. Jaeckel's away now. He didn't tell me he'd rented the place or I'd have been prepared for you. I usually clean it up once a week. It ain't been occupied for years. The last man that had it was sent to a concentration camp. I hope that don't happen to you. It's not in very good shape. The storm troopers came and hacked the place to pieces.

It's not in very good shape. It ain't been occupied for years. If you'll wait a minute, I'll turn on the gas and get you some hot water.

Won't everybody be happy for Mr. Jaeckel for having the store rented? He's a nice man, Mr. Jaeckel.

Courtyard. P appears from door at right and rushes down steps, exiting to door of courtyard (cut to)

Street Paulette appears at door.

(P. to C.) You'd better come inside. There may be some others coming along.

C: No, I'm going to call a policeman.

P: No, no don't!

C: Why not?
