

Working beautifully and harmoniously.

The unknown is as important as the known.

The unknown is not to be feared or sinister. It is just as logical, as perfect and as beautiful as the known and is in all things. It is in a blade of grass and in a drop of water. It is in facts and in figures.

Look at those trees, steadfast in their serenity, without fear, without the sense of good or evil.

In all accidents there is our destiny. In every accident lies our inexorable destiny.

An inexorable destiny guides every accident.