

When they stand on the brink of a new era a [xxx] in which the machine obeys the touch of any hand, whether prince or pauper, genius or idiot. When a Cockney child can destroy London with its little finger.

Where does artistry fit in this press-button age? Where does royalty fit in? If valor was their principle virtue. If their [xxx] might came by the virtue of knight-errant valor, or violence? Brawn or strength.

Then question the [xxx] in the sub-conscious mind of modern youth. No wonder every poor boy [xxx] to [xxx] himself, because he inwardly knows that no one is more valiant than he is. That his finger can destroy a city as well as the most powerful, as the most intelligent.

If we are to make an analogy of the arts of today—poetry, painting and sculpture and to reflect in one in the theatre, then there is little hope for acting verbosity or even the exploiting of personality. For of the modern art as it exists at the moment

The phenomenon taking place in the U.S. is a [xxx] melancholic morality, of mushroom growth that has appeared with America's great bulls of wealth. It is counteracting, opposing and retarding the happiness that should accompany modern science. The growth of wealth is so plethoric that it frustrates every rich man.

They were either too [xxx] or if they were [xxx] possible they were not interested sufficiently in me and I began planning to make adjustments. I would look for a mistress; I must have some feminine attachment.

This inspiring achievement [xxx] with new thought, new precepts in our thinking. This innovation in human existence will wipe out the dark ages of wars and violence. [xxx] achievement is a message of peace.

How wonderful to feel the mystery of the moon, to hear the moving of the wind through the house, like the wailing of ghosts.

Many of my friends felt that human decency had been downgraded.

That civilization had gone. A new era was in the making. Some of my friends regretted this. They felt that whatever happened, human decency had been downgraded. But the war had burned out that civilization.

A nation or an individual that advocates an atomic bomb for destruction purposes is doomed both materially and spiritually. Retaliation is inevitable, equal in velocity and because the answer to any great force of violence is a counter force of violence. No force in nations or [xxx] is left unequal. Nations eventually supply a counterbalance. A nation's power, no matter how altruistic, sows the seeds of its own distinction. And in the schemes of things, as one temp increased, all tempos increase. As one violence is manufactured, many violences are manufactured.

the mildewed dead around the periphery of Paris. Hundreds of thousands of bashed in crushed heads and spattered testicles of young men and swollen legs and thighs and rotten open bellies and flies. This was mixed in with the mud, and the flies. This was the price of victory, pride, and manhood—the noble cause. Men grew [xxx] of it. What moralizing can justify the price of victory? Surely not the resolute will of Britain that Germany shall not rule Europe? Did any good come out of it? Of course not, only the planting of the seed of the next world war.

To estimate a lawyer's fee for the Berry case in which an irresponsible woman sues a man for a paternity

To estimate a lawyer's fee in a paternity case in which the lawyer represents the worth of the defendant.

To estimate a lawyer fee in a paternity case by the worth of the defendant's fortune, invites every shyster lawyer to conspire with any designing woman in order to shake down any man of means.

I also charge the States with grave moral delinquency. The dropping of atomic bombs on innocent non-combatant civilians of Japan and the cowardly attack.

The infringement of this so-called [xxx] moral charges even if they were true, have no concern for me in the least. They have pulled that old one on every liberal who would not conform to their edict of thought control. Liberals in the U.S. are being persecuted in increasing numbers. The nosedive into [xxx] is frightening.

The standard of my morals stands well above that of the U. S.

Then to the charge of [xxx] when I compare the atomic bomb.

And this we call civilization and when we've had our fill of it we bomb it, blast away at it with a cannon until the whole thing's a heap of rubbish. How can personality be important if that is all it can accomplish?
